

RHYTHM IN THE BLUES

On view are Yemeni Bosnian Alia Ali's scintillating, trompe l'oeil photographs of figures swathed in highly patterned textiles – Ali's strong belief is that textile is significant to all of us, reminds us that we are born into it, we sleep in it, we eat on it, we define ourselves by it, we shield ourselves with it, and eventually, we die in it. Her vibratory works, though visually arresting, are driven by research into her ancestral history. Her work has integrated the permanent collections of The British Museum, Museum of Contemporary Photography Chicago (MoCP), New Orleans Museum of Art (NOMA), and Princeton University, among others. She is a Jameel Fellow at the Victoria & Albert Museum in London.
